The St. Louis African American History and Genealogy Society has arranged a special workshop "African American Research in Special Collections" offered by Ruth A. Hager of the St. Louis County Library's Special Collections Department.

Title: African American Research in Special Collections

Are you ready to begin researching an African American ancestor for yourself or for someone else? Are you already researching but want to more effectively use the wide range of family history resources and services which Special Collections Department and St. Louis County Library make available?

Come learn about

- The Julius K Hunter & Friends African American Collection
- Resources for cemetery, court, land, military, and vital records
- Sources about free people of color, slavery, and manumission
- "How to" books and collection guides
- Services such as subscription databases, Family History Library film rental, and Interlibrary loan

The workshop will be an introduction to using and making the most of African American resources and services for family history research at St. Louis County Library. There is no charge for the workshop.
